

Crefovi in New York for seminar "Fashion law: IP and distribution issues facing the industry today"

London fashion law firm Crefovi attends fashion law seminar "Fashion law: IP and distribution issues facing the industry today" in New York City in February 2013.

Annabelle Gauberti, founding and managing partner of London fashion law firm Crefovi, will be a guest speaker at the first fashion law seminar, organised by the "Union Internationale des Avocats" ("UIA") on Friday 15 February 2013, entitled "Fashion law: IP and distribution issues".

She will present a talk on "Fashion business partnerships and investment: IP as a business asset", during this 3 days' seminar entitled "Fashion Law: IP and distribution issues facing the industry today".

This seminar will be an invaluable tool to think about the present status of, and future trends in, the law of luxury goods and fashion. Its location in one of the most famous fashion capitals worldwide, New York City, is also adding to the attraction of this, no doubt, successful event.

We look forward to meeting you in person, at this exceptionally informative and thorough seminar!

Annabelle will keep sending tweets on @crefovi, in order to update our readers about the content of the NYC seminar. See please check our account on Twitter.
