The new EU cosmetics regulation entered into force on 11 July 2013. Many in the cosmetics industry are still confused over the exact wording of the regulation, which implies tightening safety controls and information on cosmetic products.

The Cosmetic compliance summit was Europe's first two day event dedicated entirely to the EU cosmetic regulation and its implications, giving brand owners, cosmetic designers and formulators, as well as manufacturing companies a chance to network, share best practices, discuss obstacles and overcome some of the biggest challenges the cosmetics industry faces today.

Key industry professionals met in London at the Cosmetic compliance summit to discuss the surrounding issues, on 15 and 16 October 2013.

Annabelle Gauberti, founding partner of Crefovi, an expert on the law of luxury goods, spoke on Wednesday 16 October, at the Cosmetic compliance summit, about the legal aspects of the Cosmetic products regulation and about how to be legally compliant.

While there is ample information in the industry surrounding the cosmetic products regulation from a manufacturer and safety perspective, there is less available discussing the legal implications this regulation throws up. Hear from a leading legal professional on the key areas you need to be focusing on from a legal point of view.

Please contact us if you have any questions about the implications, as well as pros and cons, of the new Cosmetic products regulation.
