London fashion law firm Crefovi will attend fashion law seminar “Fashion law: IP and distribution issues facing the industry today” in New York City in February 2013

Annabelle Gauberti, founding partner of London fashion law firm Crefovi, will be a guest speaker at the first fashion law seminar “Fashion law: IP and distribution issues” organised by the Union Internationale des Avocats (UIA) on Friday 15 February 2013.

She will present a talk on “Fashion business partnerships and investment: IP as a business asset“, during this 3 days’ seminar entitled “Fashion Law: IP and distribution issues facing the industry today“.

This seminar on Fashion law: IP and distribution issues, will be an invaluable tool to think about the present status of, and future trends in, the law of luxury goods and fashion. Its location in one of the most famous fashion capitals worldwide, New York City, is also adding to the attraction of this, no doubt, successful event.

We look forward to meeting you in person, at this exceptionally informative and thorough seminar on Fashion law: IP and distribution issues!

Annabelle will keep sending tweets on @crefovi, in order to update our readers about the content of the NYC seminar. See please check our account on Twitter.
